

Media diversity

Re: Docket No. 02-277, The Biennial Review of the FCC's broadcast mediaownership rules, I strongly believe that the FCC should retain all of the current media ownership rules now in question.

Until recently, I naively thought that at least the unelected government officials strove to serve the people. Until recently, I believed the major networks' news organizations were there to fairly report the news. Now I see that both bowing to the interests of big business and am frightened for the direction this country is headed. The news I hear and read, the music I listen to, the television programs I watch are all those chosen by a select few and reflecting what they think is important, timely, and will boost their profits. We mocked Al Jazeera but American media seems to be getting closer to it all the time.

Please reconsider this rule change. The FCC's job is to do what is best for the American public and lining the pockets of a few major corporations cannot possibly benefit anyone but a select few.

Thank you,
